Grand Jurors Want to Check Defense Dollars

Trafficante's lawyer

DEFENSE DOLLARS PROBED: A Federal Grand Jury in Indianapolis wants to know what sort of fee Tampa-Miami lawyer Henry Gonzalez was paid by two defendants in the multimillion-dollar robbery-slaying of grocery store heiress Marjorie Jackson. Gonzalez testified for more than a half hour before the grand jury, concerning loot still missing (as much as $3 million) in the case. The jury specifically asked Gonzalez to bring with him any money received as a retainer, so that serial number comparisons could be made between them and bills Mrs. Jackson withdrew from the bank. Gonzalez and assistant U.S. attorneys handling the case declined to comment. "Matters before the Grand Jury are secret," Gonzalez said.
